Hi Chad,

First, rest assured, I certainly won't be in touch with your agency reference your lateral inquiry. Also, just so you know, I don't work for HR or Civil Service and frankly, they don't really keep me in the loop too often, in fact, I'm not sure what days the interviews are scheduled next week. Having said that, I'm sure the interview can be scheduled around your availability. Please DO let me know if not. Usually the panel is a sergeant, a detective and a senior deputy which we can get together just about any time Monday-Friday – The Civil Service Examiner must attend the interview. The interview is fairly informal, kind of a get to know the lateral candidate and would they be a good fit for our agency.

As far as opportunities, new hire laterals generally are required to work patrol for two years before being eligible to apply for specialty assignments like detectives or supervisor positions. We currently have 29 detective positions, (Narcotics, Child justice, Tactical Det's, major crimes, one digital device forensics, traffic, sex offender) and about a dozen full time specialty assignments. A few are long term assignments but most are rotational on a six year basis, meaning specialty assignments are available annually as rotations occur. Deputies rotating from specialty assignments bring their experience and training back to the road where they can mentor entry level new hires and help enhance their investigative abilities.

Of course, your specialty skills will be well used even on patrol. Unless it's a major or complicated case, our patrol deputies conduct their own case investigations, even if detectives pick up the case, the initial case deputy is encouraged to stay involved as the investigation progresses. Having a digital forensic expert on a squad would be a real bonus. There are plenty of collateral duty assignments too, SWAT, marine patrol, honor guard, UAS, MRT, CNT. Promotional opportunities, we have 22 Sgt positions - just had a PPB lateral make sergeant, I think he's been here about 3 years.

I think our agency has a lot to offer. Let me know if you'd like to hear from a couple of our recent lateral deputies so you can talk with them about their experience hiring on and working here. Or if you'd like to talk with one of our detectives or come out on a ride along with patrol, let me know. Feel free to call or email me with any questions...

Take care, Fred.

Sgt.

So I am a Detective with the Port of Portland Police. I haven't told anyone at my agency that I am even looking at the possibility of leaving at this point. I have been at my dept approximately four and a half years. I am also certified by Cellebrite for phone downloads and forensic analysis as well as being a certified FTO. However, I am looking for an agency where I can grow my skills, opportunities, and promotion possibilities.

Anyways sorry for the questions in advance. If I am thinking of applying, when are they thinking the interviews will be held next week? I have a pretty heavy load in my current assignment so scheduling is always challenging. Plus I will be out of town Monday coming back Tuesday of next week. Is there a possibility of any interview times in the late afternoons?

Thank you for your time.

Chad
